Course Title	:	Contemporary Issues in Latin America and the Caribbean
Course Type (Core/Optional)	:	Core
Course Teachers	:	Dr. Priti Singh and Dr. Aprajita Kashyap
Credits	:	2
Semester	:	Winter Semester
Contact Hours	:	2 per week

Course Objectives

The objective is to create awareness among the student about developments in Latin American politics and society since the 1990s. It focusses on the major issues confronting Latin American countries at the domestic, regional and international level from an International Relations (IR) perspective. It offers a better understanding of how the world views contemporary Latin America. It examines the major debates in the region such as trends in electoral politics and challenges to democracy, regional integration, identity politics, migration, narco-trafficking, poverty, income inequality and social policies, energy, resource extractivism and strategic concerns.

Learning Outcomes

On completion of the course, students should be able to demonstrate familiarity with a wide range of Latin American political, economic and social development issues being discussed in IR; have a theoretical understanding of political processes; analyse the significance of events and developments in contemporary Latin America and its role in world politics. It would help the students acquire a multi-faceted perspective on Latin America.
