MPhil Course (IO 635) International Economic and Financial Organizations Winter Semester 2014

Course Instructor: Moushumi Basu

Teaching Schedule: 3 hrs. per week (Tuesday & Thursday 10.00 -11.30 a.m, Room 211)

The course seeks to introduce students to the complex world of international economic and financial organizations. In setting the stage for contemporary politics, the course attempts to first familiarise students with the historical background foregrounding the discussion on primary issues of international political economy. This would be followed by an introduction to the fundamentals of the Bretton Woods system (the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank group of institutions), regulating issues related to monetary control, investments and development aid. Segment III of the course would focus on the World Trade Organization and the inter-linkages between trade and other related areas of concern. Segment IV would focus on India and its participation in international organizations in the field of economic and financial cooperation. The last segment would address the possibilities of change and reform in the global architecture. The course would also try and examine the linkages between regional and the above mentioned universal international organizations.

Evaluation

Continuous assessment based on classroom attendance, participation and periodic submission of work consisting of individual assignments, a term paper cum presentation on a mutually agreed topic, followed by an end semester examination.
