PUBLICATION POLICY

The Journal Critic is an annual blind peer-reviewed publication of the Centre of Russian Studies (CRS), Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India. It was established in 1971 and since 1999 it is being regularly published. The journal investigates the new horizons, various interpretations, new ideas, reviews, etc. in Russian studies from the ancient period to the present day. There is no processing fee for publication.

The Journal invites the translation of Russian literary works such as short stories/Poems (preferably not translated earlier) from Russian to Hindi/English.

The aim of 'Critic' is to manifest the critical as well as appreciable approach on various perspectives of Russian studies worldwide today. The journal is an effort to encourage and motivate the study of Russian culture among the scholars and philologists. The translation of literary works will be published in the special issue of the journal 'Critic' only after the recommendation of peer-reviewers. The translation of the work may be from Russian to Hindi or English. The work should be submitted along with the original work, abstract (about the work) and a biography of author/translator in English and Russian Languages.
