Course Objectives

The objective of the course is to interpret United States foreign policy decision-making through the lens of political powers and process. A central aim of the course is to broaden students' understanding of the fundamental dynamics of U.S. foreign policy with an introduction of debates and theories of U.S. foreign policy and engaging students in the politics of the foreign policy process. Harnessing the conceptual, theoretical, and historical components that facilitate an analysis of American foreign policy, it explains the sources of US foreign policy, its goals and instruments of influence. The main focus of the course is to examine and analyze the role of various political institutions and bureaucracies with emphasis on the tussle or balance between Congress and the President in the foreign policy decision-making process since World War II. How does presidential leadership shape American foreign relations? How does the Congress impact and maintain its influence despite domestic political constraints?. How other actors in the federal bureaucracy like the Department of State Defense, Commerce and USTR interact and shape policy is also part of the discourse. What is the role of public opinion and interest groups in US foreign policy? This course will also serve as an overview of American foreign policy establishment, concentrating on overarching tendencies such as its fragmented power structure. The importance of these tendencies will be explained by showing how thoroughly each of them affects policy. Emphasis is also placed on the impact of domestic factors on international issues (e.g. Rise of China, Nonproliferation, terrorism etc.) faced by the United States since the end of the cold war.

Learning Outcomes

Achieve significant insights on US foreign policy and develop critical analysis through the lens of decision making. Gain a balanced perspective of salient issues and a deep understanding of the factors influencing relationships between the various actors of US foreign policy. Develop independent thinking about key foreign policy choices and broaden the debates on fundamentals of U.S. foreign policy.

Evaluation Methods

Sessional work, Research Paper, Mid and End Semester Examination (50+50)
