Course Objective

The objective of this course is to trace the diplomatic history of Brazil and examine political, social and economic processes that have helped in shaping Brazil as a regional power in Latin America. It involves major socio-political and economic issues in Brazil. The course also intends to look at India-Brazil relations since 1947 emphasizing on multi-faced dimensions (political, social, economic and cultural). Brazil is playing a significant role in world politics today, and the course is designed to cover various aspects in this regard so that the students can understand multi-dimensional role of Brazil in global affairs.

Learning Outcomes

The course provides comprehensive knowledge about the diplomatic history of Brazil, its political, social and economic processes and structures; and its place in the world. The course also aims to provide a thorough understanding to the students about India-Brazil relations since 1947, related aspects and how both the countries are working to become global powers.
